

JOHN BATES, JR. AND LUCINA ANGELINE KELLER
BATES

John Bates Jr. born Jan. 13, 1842, a son of John Bates, Sr., and Hannah Draycott. His wife Lucina Angeline Keller was born

April 6, 1848 in Salt Lake City. They lived first on a 160-acre homestead at Silver Creek, where they raised cattle and sheep. Soon they moved to the Bates ranch on the Provo river in Wasatch County. John Jr. died July 14, 1917. Lucina died Dec. 2, 1911.

They went through all the rigors of pioneering: building log cabins and pole fences around their farm. Lucina was busy with all her household tasks and sewing for her family of fourteen children.

Lucina Angeline was an excellent seamstress, making many beautiful dresses. She did much in caring for the sick and at times cooking for a large number of workers and neighbors. Water was some distance from their home so she did her washing on the rocks, near the stream, using her own home-made soap. She also made her own candles and wicks for coal-oil lamps.

There was always heavy snow in the winter and heavy runoff in the spring. Then, many hours were spent repairing the places where high water had washed out the road to Heber. Their ranch was close to Kamas, and not far from Francis, Summit County.

John helped build the two-room school house which was located in Francis, which many of their children attended.

Hunting and fishing were his favorite sports.

Provo River to its ultimate distribution, i.e., the Utah Lake by 13 Sept 1852.

They then came to Brigham Young in SLCU with glowing reports of plenty of timber in the High Uintah Mts., but its accessibility would depend upon a road into the area.

William Gardner <sup>strongly</sup> recommended to B.Y. to build a road up Provo Canyon from Provo into the "Timpanogas Valley" - the name given to this valley by the Ute and Shoshoni Indians for many moons.

Brigham Young moved quickly to form a Provo Canyon Road Co. & purchased the first stock in that company. However,

The coming of Johnston's Army <sup>from Fort Leavenworth Kansas</sup> with 2000 troops toward SLCU in the summer of 1857 and handling all the rumors that preceded this movement of troops; occupied Brigham's attention.

So the road building had to wait until the summer of 1858. At that time, 500 men were assembled & they brought wagons, horses and
